LAST WEEK

Obviously Iowa State University Professor Jack Whitmer is no amateur when it comes to making a presentation on government costs of operation and analysis of such data. Every bit of it was extremely interesting and thought provoking but he moved so fast that I'm not going to be able to do much for you fellows who couldn't make it to last Wednesday's meeting.

The data presented by Professor Whitmer was gathered, compiled, and analyzed by the Economics and Political Science Departments of Iowa State University. A few important points which he made--If you look at the funding which the schools receive from the tax on liquor, it is obvious it is our duty to consume as much of the "stuff" as possible.

It is shocking to look at data indicating the small percentage of the eligible voters who actually take advantage of the opportunity to express their opinion in an election. That Iowa has had more miles of road built with the aid of Federal Government funding than any other state! That it is estimated that the number of students entering school ten years from now will drop sharply--in some counties as much as 46%. Only four counties out of Iowa's ninety-nine will have more entering school than at present. (Looks like temporary school buildings might make sense at that.)

When looking at taxes and what they buy, look hard at the conversion efficiency. Just possibly we aren't always getting our money's worth! Too bad you weren't at the Roosevelt Wednesday noon. It was a good one!
